Environmental Careers Overview

The environment provides many exciting, interesting and satisfying career choices stretching across a tremendous range of fields and disciplines. Working in the environmental field is rewarding because you can contribute to the maintenance and conservation of essential life systems necessary for our human survival. There are two main routes which you can take:

- A social-environmental perspective
- An environmental science perspective

It is important to note that these two complement one another and effective environmental management combines both these perspectives.

Social-environmental careers

Normally one progresses into the social-environmental perspective through a Social Science or Arts degree presented at a university. Subjects may include Anthropology, Archaeology, Development Studies, Geography and Environmental Studies, Law (Environmental Law), Journalism (Environmental Journalism) and Education (Environmental Education). Careers in this field are centred around humans and their relations with the environment, and ways of making these relations beneficial to both people and the environment.

Career path qualification:

- Community conservation and rural development
BA degree with subjects such as Anthropology, Development Studies, Geography and Environmental Studies
- Environmental educators
HdipEd with subjects such as Geography or Biology
Formal Environmental Education courses pursued at postgraduate level
- Environmental lawyers
BA LLB degree with Environmental Law as a subject
- Environmental journalists
No formal qualification other than journalism (degree or diploma)
- Cultural resource specialists
BA degree with subjects such as Archaeology, Anthropology, Political and Social Studies or Social History
- Eco-tourism specialists
Tourism degree or diploma with environmental interest

Environmental science careers

Environmental science careers start by completing a science degree at university or a relevant diploma course at technikon. Subjects in the natural sciences such as Zoology, Botany and Ecology generally lead to a career path in biodiversity conservation, but may also lead to a career in environmental management. Subjects in the physical sciences such as Mathematics, Physics and Chemistry might lead to a career path in environmental management aspects such as pollution control or waste management. Landscape architects and civil engineers pursue environmental management through ensuring that environmental concerns are brought to bear on infrastructural development.

Career path qualification

- Environmental impact assessment and environmental management
BSc degree in natural sciences with postgraduate courses in environmental management
- Landscape architect
Landscape architect degree at the University of Pretoria or the University of Cape Town
- Nature conservation
Technikon diploma in Nature Conservation or BSc degree with subjects such as Zoology, Botany, Ecology.
- Specialist scientists in biodiversity e.g. marine biologist, zoologist, ecologist
- Postgraduate degrees in Zoology, Botany and Ecology, specialising in particular fields of interest
- Waste managers and pollution controllers
BSc degree with subjects such as Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry, Climatology
Technikon diploma or degree in Environmental Science or Engineering
- Environmental engineers
Civil Engineering degree or B Tech degree in Civil Engineering

Universities and Technikons will have more information on courses and degrees.

Contact the Department of Environmental Affairs for more information as well as the requirements and timelines of the annual internship programme's intake. The call for applications is usually sent out in October/November each year.
